

WORK IN HER HANDS
 —Mr. Harry Bennie has bought the stock and tools and business of Clapp & Sausman's tin shop, and will continue that branch of trade at the old place of the latter in the rear of their hardware store. Mr. Bennie has been in their employ for sometime, and is well versed in the business. He invites public patronage and guarantees good work.

October 23, 1885, Evansville Review, p. 3, col. 3, Evansville, Wisconsin

Mr. Harry Benney and Mr. Walter Biglow have bought the entire interest of Clapp & Sausman, in the hardware business. Mr. Sausman still retains the farm machinery business. Mr. Clapp is looking for a place to reengage in the hardware business. We shall be sorry to loss Messers. C. & S. from our citizenship.

July 30, 1886, Evansville Review, p. 1, col. 4, Evansville, Wisconsin

GARLAND STOVES & RANGES

Biglow & Benney

Dealers in Hardware, Tinware &c.
 We also keep a full line of

PLOWS,
 Norwegian, Turf, Stubbls,
 Rockford Clipper,
CLIMAX DISK HARROW.

SEEDERS,
 Prairie City & Leader.

WE MAKE A SPECIALTY OF
STOVES.
 Cooking, Heating, & Gasolin

Two doors East of Evansville Bank, at the old stand of Clapp & Sausman, Main street,
 Evansville, Oct. 29.

July 15, 1887, Evansville Review, Evansville, Wisconsin p. 1, col. 5

Harry Benney has the job of running the electric dynamo vice Hollister resigned. He also sees to the night watching about the shops, which labor Mr. Hurlburt attends to as usual. The salary paid is $15 per week. They dynamo is not usually run later than 11 o'clock p.m.

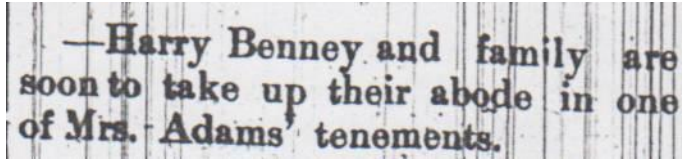

March 4, 1890, Evansville Review, p. 1, col. 2, Evansville, Wisconsin

— Harry Benney had rather a hard time Thursday night making light for denizens of the burg. At about half past eight or nine o'clock, a shower came up, the thunder roared and the rain poured, sawitched in were some blood curdling flashes of lightning, that almost made one think the neither regions were opening to swallow him up. All at once the electric lights began to flicker and dance until only a gray streak was seen in the glass bulbs and then came another peal that shook the very firmament, and down came the rain in foaming, hissing sheets, that filled the gutters and ran eddying and whirling to the creek below. Mr. Benny was all this time doing his best to keep the dynamo going. His main belt flew off and on trying to replace it alone, received a shock in his arm that nearly prostrated him and made him feel there was "a power behind the throne" that he could not cope with.

The shock melted his armature and severed all connections for street lighting. When the storm was over he started up the machine and ran the street lights until shutting down time. Most of the stores and business places have the old kerosene lamp at hand and were soon lighted up, but the evening was far gone and people groped their way home and went early to bed. Mr. Benny says it is seldom he gets frightened while working the dynamo, but Thursday night he acknowledges he did feel a little timid; the pesky stuff was entirely too familiar for his usual stout nerve.

Benney & Herbert fitted up a traction steam thresher last week for the Steele Bros. and made it as serviceable and good as new for all practical purposes. Mr. Benney mounted the foot board and with one hand on the throttle and the other on the steering wheel made a good exhibition.

August 16, 1892, Evansville Review, p. 1, col. 2, Evansville, Wisconsin

—Harry Benney and family are soon to take up their abode in one of Mrs. Adams' tenements.

May 30, 1893, Evansville Review, p. 1, col. 4, Evansville, Wisconsin

Mr. Harry Benny will erect a handsome residence on a lot which he recently purchased on Garfield Avenue.

March 9, 1895, The Badger, p. 1, col. 2, Evansville, Wisconsin

Mr. Harry Benney and family moved into their own house on church St., Wednesday. Mrs. K. C. Beech having purchased the Adams house vacated by them.

Enterprise, April 2, 1897, p. 1, col. 2, Evansville, Wisconsin

Mr. J. C. Benney, of Valparaiso, Ind., is visiting his cousin Harry Benney, of this city. Mr. J. C. Benney looks after the U. S. mail on the Grand Trunk road out of Chicago.

April 6, 1897, The Tribune, p. 1, col. 3, Evansville, Wisconsin

Mr. Harry Benny is about to open a new hardware and tin shop. Mr. Benny is a well known expert in this line of business, and will no doubt receive a deserving share of patronage in this line. Give him a trial and thereby encourage every new industry possible, which is the best and only means of building up your town.

February 12, 1901, The Tribune, p. 3, col. 3, Evansville, Wisconsin